The MICHELIN-Key hotels of 2026 with vines of their own,
wine of their own, or a winemaker close at hand.

2026 EDITION · SEPTEMBER 2026

An independent guide by The Allocation. Not affiliated with or endorsed by the MICHELIN Guide.

READING THE GUIDE

The United States comes first; the other countries follow in order of how many hotels they bring. Each country is divided into the regions where its hotels are.

Every region opens with a map. The numbered squares match the register beneath it and the profiles that follow: they number the hotels, not the Keys. Where markers crowd together, a fine line runs from the number to the spot, and at regional scale every position is approximate.

The maps show selected boundaries, rivers, lakes and towns, for context. They do not draw appellation boundaries. A hotel's winery can be somewhere else entirely: the map marks the hotel, and the profile explains the wine.

Keys are MICHELIN's award for hotels; Stars are for restaurants. Green Stars, which MICHELIN is phasing out, recognize sustainability. We checked every hotel's Keys against MICHELIN's live listings on September 24, 2026, and restaurant distinctions come from the 2026 selections unless a year says otherwise.

Room counts are MICHELIN's where it publishes one and the hotel's own otherwise, and include suites, villas and whatever else a hotel lets. Where a profile gives hectares, it keeps vineyard and estate apart. Figures we could not confirm are left out rather than guessed.

3 MICHELIN KEYS · CHIUSDINO · VAL DI MERSE, SIENA

Borgo Santo Pietro is a working farm with very good sheets. Its 25 acres of vines, first planted in 2014, sit within what Saporium's chef describes as 120 hectares of organic cultivation, and the labels read like a dedication page: Per Gli Amici, Per Mia Madre, Per L'Amore Mio. Saporium, the restaurant, holds a MICHELIN Star and a Green Star.

OWN LABEL Per Gli Amici; Per Mia Madre; Per L'Amore Mio

Borgo San Felice is a Chianti Classico village that the hotel shares with a winery, Agricola San Felice, whose 140 hectares of vineyard settle the question of the house wine. Poggio Rosso, the restaurant, holds a MICHELIN Star and a Green Star, so the village eats as well as it drinks.

2 MICHELIN KEYS · SAN GIUSTINO VALDARNO · AREZZO

Il Borro farms 85 hectares of organic vineyard in the Valdarno and makes a dozen wines from them. The names to know are Il Borro, Polissena, Pian di Nova and Petruna, a Sangiovese raised in amphora: one of the oldest methods in wine, and currently one of the most fashionable.

07 COMO Castello del Nero

1 MICHELIN KEY · BARBERINO TAVARNELLE · CHIANTI CLASSICO

COMO's castle stands in the Chianti Classico hills near Barberino Tavarnelle and produces two things Tuscany is never short of, wine and olive oil, both under its own name. There are 50 rooms, and La Torre, the restaurant, holds a MICHELIN Star, so the oil and the wine have somewhere suitable to meet.

Banfi is one of Montalcino's giants, with 2,830 hectares to its name, and Il Borgo is the small hotel inside it: 14 rooms. The range runs from Brunello and Rosso to Moscadello, the town's older and sweeter tradition. La Sala dei Grappoli, the restaurant, holds a MICHELIN Star.

1 MICHELIN KEY · CINIGIANO · MAREMMA

Castello di Vicarello is small in every sense, with seven hectares of vines, five wines and eleven rooms. The wines are Merah, Poggio Vico, Santauroora, Terre di Vico and Castello di Vicarello, from the Montecucco corner of the Maremma, and olive groves fill in the rest of the farm.

10 Conti di San Bonifacio Wine Resort

1 MICHELIN KEY · GAVORRANO · MAREMMA

Conti di San Bonifacio has seven rooms and seven hectares of vines, planted in 2003: a hectare for every room, which strikes us as the right ratio. The wines take Latin names, Docet and Sustinet, alongside the estate's Monteregio di Massa Marittima.

12 Villa Le Prata – Residenza del Vescovo

1 MICHELIN KEY · MONTALCINO · SIENA

Despite the bishop in its name, Villa Le Prata is a Brunello estate. It farms several separate plots rather than one tidy block, and bottles Brunello and Rosso di Montalcino under the estate's name. There are eight rooms, which keeps the congregation select.

APPELLATION	Brunello di Montalcino DOCG; Rosso di Montalcino DOC
OWN LABEL	Villa Le Prata; Vigna Le Prata; Leprata

13 Villa Petriolo

1 MICHELIN KEY · CERRETO GUIDI · FLORENCE

Villa Petriolo is an organic farm near Cerreto Guidi that happens to be a very comfortable hotel. It makes its own wine, Chianti among it, and a fair share of its own food, and it holds a sustainability certification for the way the hotel is run, which is rarer than it ought to be.

Planeta makes wine all over Sicily, from vineyards and wineries across the island, and La Foresteria is where it puts its guests: 14 rooms at Menfi. The vines outside are one chapter of the Planeta story rather than the whole book; the Menfi DOC bottlings are the local one.

01 Baumanière

3 MICHELIN KEYS · LES BAUX-DE-PROVENCE · ALPILLES

The labels straddle Luberon, Ventoux and IGP Vaucluse, which is what happens when a vineyard sits where Provence can't quite decide.

APPELLATION Luberon; Ventoux; IGP Vaucluse

05 Château de Berne

1 MICHELIN KEY · FLAYOSC, NEAR LORGUES · VAR

Château de Berne has 515 hectares to play with and gives 150 of them to vines. The wine is Côtes de Provence, which in this part of the world usually means pink. The hotel keeps 34 rooms and suites, with villas beyond them, and Le Jardin de Berne, the restaurant, holds a MICHELIN Star.

The maps place each hotel in its region. Markers use published coordinates, mostly MICHELIN's, and otherwise the hotel's own, a tourism board's or OpenStreetMap's. At regional scale, every position is approximate.

Fine lines give the geography, and a heavier outline marks the region named in the heading where its borders fit. That outline is an administrative region, never a wine appellation, and none of these maps is fit for navigation.
